

Property Loss / Missing Property

Gracia Walker | Jacksonville Beach to Keystone Heights, Florida | June 12-13, 2026

Former address / pickup: 3675 Sanctuary Way South, Jacksonville Beach, Florida 32250

Moving company: 1st Coast Express Purpose: Supporting statement and chronology for police report

Updated October 3, 2026. This is my current recollection and inventory. I may supplement or correct it as I locate records and continue checking my belongings.

1. Background and packing

I hired 1st Coast Express to move my household belongings from Jacksonville Beach to Keystone Heights, Florida, on June 12, 2026. The crew included Brandon, Chad, and Sean. I had lived in Jacksonville Beach for 24 years. This was a major and emotional move involving many boxes and belongings.

I entrusted my belongings to the moving company. At the time, I believed the crew was taking good care of my property. I did not have a reason to believe that I needed to watch individual boxes or belongings constantly.

My belongings included family jewelry, my mother's diamond engagement ring, whose exact carat weight and current value are unknown, my mother's coin collection, handbags, and other personal property. Some items have substantial monetary value and others have significant sentimental value.

The movers also moved two safes that I had emptied before the move. I am concerned that seeing and handling the safes may have suggested that jewelry or collectibles could be among my household belongings. I do not know what the movers inferred from the safes, and I did not witness anyone taking property.

2. Moving-day timeline and second trailer

The crew initially arrived in a U-Haul rental truck. I felt some concern when I saw the rental truck, but proceeded with the move. This was the first truck; I never saw the second trailer. The moving work began about 10:00 a.m. on June 12, 2026. I left Jacksonville Beach for my new home in Keystone Heights at approximately 6:00 p.m. Before I left, I was informed that a second trailer was coming. The movers remained at the Jacksonville Beach property with my remaining belongings while they waited for that trailer.

In 2025, I sustained a major spinal injury: a T12 compression fracture. I continue to suffer pain from this fracture. The physical strain of the move pushed me beyond what I could tolerate, and I needed to lie down. This is why I left Jacksonville Beach at approximately 6:00 p.m. and could not stay to wait for the second trailer.

I never saw the second trailer. I did not see it arrive, what was loaded into it, or whether property was transferred between trailers. I was not present to observe the final handling or loading after I left. I do not know the movers' actual departure time from Jacksonville Beach.

The movers were at my new home by approximately 9:30 p.m. I bought Domino's pizza for the crew at the new house and recall picking it up around 8:30 p.m.; it sat for a while. The pizza purchase totaled $70.85. My Citibank transaction record shows 7:47 p.m., but I do not know whether that reflects ordering, pickup, or payment processing.

Unloading continued past midnight into June 13, 2026, until approximately 12:30 a.m. I recall the movers leaving about 1:00 a.m. on June 13, 2026. From the 10:00 a.m. start on June 12 to their final departure on June 13, the move lasted about 15 hours.

I estimate the distance between the homes at approximately 64 miles, with travel taking about 1½ hours or longer depending on traffic. This does not establish the movers' actual departure time, route, or stops.

These times reflect my current best recollection and are approximate.

3. Delayed discovery and concern about targeting

I am 65 years old and live alone. I had lived in my Jacksonville Beach home for 24 years, and this was a major household move involving a very large number of boxes and belongings.

Because of the volume of property involved, I could not immediately determine at delivery whether every item had arrived. Over the following months, I continued unpacking and organizing and reasonably believed that belongings I had not yet located were still somewhere among the remaining boxes.

After completing the unpacking and conducting extensive searches, I began discovering that multiple valuable and irreplaceable belongings were missing. The fact that several valuable items and categories of property could not be located caused me to become concerned that this was not simply a misplaced box or an accidental loss.

I am particularly concerned that the circumstances of such a large move created an opportunity for property to be removed without my discovering the loss immediately. With so many boxes, it would have been difficult for me to know at delivery that individual items were missing, and in fact it took several months before I was able to identify the extent of the missing property.

Based on the number and nature of the missing items and the circumstances I have described elsewhere in this report, I am concerned that boxes may have been deliberately opened, searched, or examined for valuable property. I did not personally witness anyone taking my belongings, and I am identifying this as my concern and suspicion so that law enforcement can investigate and determine what occurred.

Because I am 65, live alone, and had entrusted my household property to people I hired to perform this move, I am also asking the investigating agency to consider whether the circumstances warrant investigation under Florida laws concerning exploitation of persons age 65 or older, in addition to any applicable theft, fraud, or other offenses.

On September 29, 2026, I returned home specifically to check my handbag collection. Most of my other handbags appeared to be present. I could not locate the three Louis Vuitton bags listed below. I initially feared that my entire handbag collection was gone; the physical check narrowed that concern to these three bags.

4. Current missing-property list

- My mother's diamond engagement ring, which may have been larger than three carats. The exact carat weight and current value are unknown.
- My mother's coin collection.

- Journaling and jewelry-making materials in a missing box or boxes: leather journals, pens, papers and other journaling supplies; charms and other supplies used to make necklaces and jewelry; and a portable mini photo printer and related supplies. I cannot say with certainty whether these materials were packed together in one box or in two separate boxes.

- One Louis Vuitton bucket bag.

- Two Louis Vuitton duffel bags of different sizes.

These items remain unlocated as of October 2, 2026. I may supplement this list if I identify additional missing belongings. Detailed descriptions, photographs, receipts, or valuations can be provided as available. No monetary estimate is included here because I have not established a documented value for each item.

Ring background: When I was 18, I was told its value could pay for several trips around the world. I do not have a confirmed carat weight or current appraisal, and its monetary value remains unknown. The ring also has immense sentimental value to me.

Packing details: The Louis Vuitton handbags were packed inside clear zippered tote bags, so their contents could have been visible during handling. My mother's engagement ring and coin collection were packed in a sealed box associated with my journaling and jewelry-making materials. I cannot now reconstruct with certainty how these materials were divided among the boxes or whether they were all together in one box or in two separate boxes. These items and materials remain missing. None of my journals arrived. Several journals cost more than $100 each; I have not yet established their exact number or total value.

My journaling and jewelry-making activities were connected. I photographed individual pieces of jewelry and used a small portable printer to print the photographs, which I placed in my journals with written entries about the pieces. The portable mini printer and related supplies are also missing, along with the charms and other jewelry-making supplies.

5. Additional concern about the coin collection

I believe a box containing the coin collection could have been identified by shaking it, but I did not witness anyone do so. I cannot personally establish when or how each item disappeared.

6. Second trailer: information requiring investigation

I request that the handling and movement of my property be fully accounted for, particularly after I left Jacksonville Beach at approximately 6 p.m. The company's records and the individuals involved may establish:

- When the second trailer arrived and who brought or drove it.

- The identity of everyone who handled my belongings or had access to either trailer.

- What property was loaded into each trailer and whether property was transferred between them.

- The route, timing, stops, and any storage involved in transportation.

- Whether all property loaded into either trailer was ultimately delivered to me.

7. Requested company records

I request copies of all records relating to my move, including documents bearing my signature; the contract and bill of lading; inventory, loading, and delivery records; valuation or liability documents; the final invoice; and records identifying the crew, drivers, and both trailers.

I also request any relevant photographs, dispatch records, GPS records, communications, storage records, and other documents showing the handling, transportation, and delivery of my household goods.

8. Records and evidence available

I have photographs of some missing property, moving receipts and payment records, and a complaint submitted to the Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services on September 27, 2026. I can provide these and additional photographs, descriptions, receipts, or identifying information that I locate.

9. Impact and personal safety concerns

Since discovering the missing property, I have become increasingly afraid and concerned about my personal safety because the individuals involved in my move know where I live and know that I live alone. I am 65 years old. This incident has significantly affected my sense of security in my new home. I am taking additional safety precautions, including arranging personal protection such as pepper spray and planning to attend a personal-defense class in Gainesville during the second week of October 2026. These concerns describe the impact of the incident on me; they are not a claim that anyone has made a threat against me.

10. Statement

This report reflects my current recollection and the results of my checking. I want the movement and disposition of my belongings investigated. I may supplement or correct this report if additional facts or records become available.
