

My husband and I moved on June 18 and 19th of 2023 from 4100 sq. ft. house in Seneca, SC into 3 storage units (one climate controlled and 2 non-CC) until our new house was ready to move into. Our furniture was high end along with antiques and a lot of expensive art work. We chose Carey Movers out of Greer based on reviews online and price we were quoted. This was the biggest mistake we have ever made. When we had our furniture moved out of storage and into our new house, we discovered the majority of our nice furniture was either broken, dented, smashed, marred, scratched, destroyed and some items totally missing. Items that should have been put in the climate-controlled unit were not and were either damaged or destroyed. After seeing all the damage and destruction of our furniture one would assume that the crew didn't have any experience what so ever, but I was told by the owner, they were extremely experienced. When you pack a commissioned piece of art with tools, use packing tape directly on leather furniture, not wrap furniture properly and load heavy furniture on top of light weight furniture, it gets broken or damaged! When your items go into storage units, you find out later what disaster looks like when the items are moved out. Thankfully, we chose a different moving company with no issues. We paid to have some of the items repaired, but some were family heirlooms and are irreplaceable. I have moved over 18 times up and down the East and mid-West in my life and used numerous companies with few if any issues. Carey Movers was horrible!!! They don't deserve a star at all.
